

FIND OUT

Christie's publicity blitz costs New Jersey taxpayers $5 million

By Mark Lagerkvist / February 2, 2015 / 1 Comment

Phot by Tim Larsen | Governor's Office

POWER TIE: New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie gets ready for his next YouTube moment

By Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey Watchdog

It took more than charm, chutzpah and media savvy to catapult Chris Christie into a national celebrity and presidential contender.

The New Jersey governor also used $5.43 million from state taxpayers to pay the team that helped turn him into a rising star on television, radio, YouTube, Twitter, Facebook and other outlets.

While Christie publicly boasted of his successes in downsizing government, the total salaries of his communications officers have increased by nearly 50 percent in five years, according to a New Jersey Watchdog analysis of state records.

The governor's media team has expanded to include 16 full-time staffers and a payroll of roughly $1.36 million last year. Five of the employees collect six-figure incomes, led by communications director Maria Comella at $140,000 a year. (Click here for the

NEWSLETTER SIGNUP

United MileagePlus® Explorer Card Earn 30,000 Bonus Miles

- Free Checked Bag
- Priority Boarding
- No Foreign Transaction Fees

Intro Offer - First Year Free

EXPLORE NOW

FEATURED STORIES

Three in four NJ sheriffs double-dip millions via pension loophole
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

Court orders Gov. Christie to reveal air travel records, not hotel bills
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

Christie's biggest double-dipper quits on cusp of NJ pension debate
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

NJ Watchdog fights for Guadagno pension probe records in appeals court
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

'Seven deadly sins' of NJ pensions add up to $104 billion debt
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

NJ pension board guns down cop's bizarre

staff roster and salaries.)

While it is usual for governors to hire press secretaries or communications specialists, the scope of Christie's media operation is without precedent. It also raises the question of who benefits most from the hoopla — New Jersey or Christie.

Christie is the first governor to make extensive use of YouTube. Virtually all of his public appearances are recorded, photographed and videotaped for possible use. His staff selects moments and encounters to fit the image they want the public to see.

Of the hundreds of videos posted on the governor's official YouTube channel, the biggest hit has been Christie's confrontation at a town hall meeting with a teacher upset by school layoffs and cutbacks.

"If what you want to do is giggle and put on a show nearly every time I talk, then I have no interest in answering your question," the governor scolded the teacher in a video viewed online more than 3.5 million times.

The videos and other releases from Christie are emailed to 2,500 reporters, editors and TV producers. Matt Katz of WNYC was allowed to see, but not copy, the distribution list as part of the settlement of his public records lawsuit. New Jersey Watchdog also is seeking the list under the Open Public Records Act.

Christie's team reserves special access to the governor for its favored media targets. It is no coincidence when a New York Times reporter is invited to watch him tape his weekly radio show or when a Washington Post writer sits with him at a high school football game. Nor is it happenstance when the governor offers exclusive interviews to a network news program or appears as a guest on a late-night talk show.

The publicity machine Christie has built at taxpayers' expense stands in contrast to the governor's publicized efforts to reign in the cost of New Jersey state government.

"We have to stop spending so much," Christie told CNBC in a televised interview shortly after taking office in 2010. "People don't want bigger government."

At the time, the governor's office had an annual budget of \$4.68 million a year. Five years later, that figure ballooned to \$6.7 million — an increase of 43 percent.

The expense of Christie's media team has grown even faster.

In 2010, the state paid less than $912,000 to employees in the governor's communications office. The cost of those salaries had risen to $1.36 million a year by 2014 — a hike of 49 percent.

Despite the size and cost of the operation, Christie's team has a reputation for not returning calls or answering emails from reporters — particularly those who write stories the governor doesn't like.

Christie's spokesmen did not respond to New Jersey Watchdog's requests to comment.

The governor, meanwhile, is boosting his visibility on an international stage. Traveling disability scheme

Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

40 New Jersey part-time 'temps' collect nearly $6M a year
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

'$100K Club' of NJ retirees grows 75 percent in three years
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

Meet the 'Three Stooges' of New Jersey disability pensions
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

Disabled double-dippers drains millions from NJ pensions
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

18 double-dipping NJ lawmakers block pension reform
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

80 NJ State Police return to payroll to double-dip millions
Mark Lagerkvist | New Jersey

Double-dips mean millions for 45 'retired' NJ school chiefs
Mark Lagerkvist | Education

Taxpayer trauma! 'Disabled' cops clean up on pensions
Admin | New Jersey

60 double-dippers collect $10M a year; a third hired under Gov. Christie
Kelly Carson | New Jersey

DMV Driving Records Search

FIRST NAME

LAST NAME

STATE

in London, Christie was scheduled to meet Monday with British Prime Minister David Cameron.

Click here to LEARN HOW TO STEAL OUR STUFF!

Mark Lagerkvist

Mark Lagerkvist is New Jersey Watchdog's investigative reporter. He can be reached at mark@NJwatchdog.org.

Sign-up for our New Jersey Watchdog email list to receive the latest news and in-depth coverage.

1 Comment Watchdog.org

Login ▾

Sort by Newest ▾

Share Favorite

Join the discussion...

NJ voter • 33 minutes ago

I hear London has really big private equity firms.

Reply • Share

ALSO ON WATCHDOG.ORG

WHAT'S THIS?

North Dakota may lose $5.5 billion in Stimpson accuses Virginia GOP of revenue as oil plummets helping Howell

28 comments • 4 days ago

gonzalesfpe — You don't have it now. How can you Lose it? Oh, Politicians have already counted their eggs ...

Lawrence Wood — I strongly supported Whitbeck for his newly elected Chairman role over ...

Right to work bill passes first hurdle

1 comment • 4 days ago

FlameCCT — Outstanding. We have been run by the Progressive

WATCHDOG IN YOUR STATE

- Alabama
- Nevada
- California
- New Jersey

SECTIONS

- News
- Issues

Find us on Facebook

New Jersey Watchdog

You like this.

- Colorado
- New Mexico
- Video
- Florida
- North Dakota
- Hawaii
- Ohio
- Idaho
- Oklahoma
- CONNECT
- Illinois
- Oregon
- Kansas
- Pennsylvania
- Texas
- Louisiana
- Tennessee
- Minnesota
- Vermont
- Mississippi
- Virginia
- Missouri
- Washington
- Montana
- Wisconsin
- Nebraska

- Like us on Facebook
- Follow us on Twitter
- Join us on Google+
- Watch us on YouTube

You and 1,695 others like New Jersey Watchdog. 1,695 people like New Jersey Watchdog.

Facebook social plugin